Here is an interesting tidbit from DefenseTalk this morning. With the F-35 just awarded to Lockheed Martin, could this be the beginning of a new round of bidding? Or is the U.S. government going to come up with a better system for picking a winner for the program? I’ve been following the F-35 program from its beginnings and I’ve kept an eye out for a new round. There’s nothing I’ve heard yet that could lead me to believe that’s going to happen. If you think about it, as cool as the F-35 may be, there is just no way you can change the process to speed up the evaluation. A new bidder would need to have production capacity ready in a hurry. A new bidder would also need to find a new partner, one that can work with the US at the same time. There’s just no way to speed up the process. There is another possibility though. I talked with someone who works on the program from the manufacturer’s side. This person told 82157476af
